Bow porcelain bocage candelabra group

Bow porcelain bocage candelabra group, modelled a young lady playing a triangle, and a young man with horn and drum, restored, 29cm.

There is professional restoration throughout the piece. The majority of the branches have restoration, mostly towards the base. The male figure has both legs restored with the areas surrounding them also restored suggesting it has been broken through at some point. The scrolled elements of the base also have areas of restoration. Several losses to the foliage, with four leaves presently loose. The female is missing the beater (chipped off) and the male's horn is restored.
